Shorthand: skeleton horde encounter in Neverwinter. Zevara the rogue went poisoned. won decisively. looted amulet of health.

Narrative: The haunting wail of the howling wind through the crumbling walls of Neverwinter's forsaken north gate pierced the veil of twilight as we approached. The sun had long since set, and a palpable tension hung heavy in the air. Our party, a motley crew of seasoned adventurers, prepared ourselves for another harrowing foray into the uncharted depths of the city's perilous underbelly. Little did we know that tonight would test our mettle like never before.

As we made our way down the dimly lit alleyways, the faint flicker of gutter torches cast grotesque shadows upon the tattered remains of once pr...

FANTASY / dnd_5e / combat

Shorthand: orc raiders encounter in the Underdark. Zevara the rogue went unconscious. succeeded at great cost. looted 200 gold pieces.

Narrative: The musty, damp air of the Underdark clung to me like a shroud as I hunkered down behind the rotting remains of a long-dead ogre, my quill poised above the parchment in my pack. The flickering light from my dim lantern cast eerie shadows across the cavern walls, each twist and turn revealing new chambers filled with strange and terrifying creatures, their twisted forms illuminated by the unholy glow of fungi that lined the ceiling. It was here, in these darkest depths, that our party had encountered the vile orc raiders.

As we turned a corner, I could feel the tension in the air grow thicker...

FANTASY / pathfinder_2e / combat

Shorthand: fought xulgath warriors near Magnimar. Recall Knowledge succeeded. barely survived.

Narrative: I, Lorekeeper, sat huddled in the dim recesses of my traveling cart as the echoes of battle slowly died away. The sun hung low in the sky, casting long shadows over the battlefield that stretched out before me. My heart raced with adrenaline and the thrill of survival, my mind still replaying the events that had transpired only moments before. It had started innocently enough; a routine stop at the bustling port city of Magnimar to resupply and gather information. But fate, it seemed, had other plans for me.

As I wandered the streets, my gaze fell upon a group of Xulgath warriors gathered outs...

FANTASY / pathfinder_2e / combat

Shorthand: fought young blue dragon near the Darklands. Treat Wounds roll passed. failed and regrouped.

Narrative: The sun had set as we approached the edge of the Darklands, the swampy forest giving way to a desolate wasteland. I could hear the faint sound of water in the distance - the only thing that kept the oppressive air from being unbearable. As we moved cautiously forward, we heard the unmistakable roar of a young blue dragon echoing through the night. We readied our weapons and braced ourselves for the battle ahead.

I went first, using my Action Point to Recall Knowledge on the dragon's weaknesses. Unfortunately, my Treat Wounds roll failed, leaving me unable to contribute much to the fight. The...

Shorthand: attacked by witch hunter inquisitors in an abandoned temple of Sigmar. Critical Hit: arm mangled. succeeded at great cost. grim business.

Narrative: The once hallowed chambers of the desolate temple of Sigmar now echoed with the shrill cries and maniacal laughter of our pursuers. Witch hunter inquisitors had tracked us down, their relentless quest for heresy and infidelity leading them to our doorstep. As we huddled together in the dimly lit sanctum, I could feel the cold sweat trickle down my spine, each heartbeat pounding like a war drum in my chest.

Lorekeeper.quest -- Training Data Report

Shorthand: attacked by Beastmen warband in Bogenhafen. Corruption point gained. won decisively. grim business.

Narrative: I, Lorekeeper of Bogenhafen, bear witness to this bleak account of the recent assault that befell our once tranquil village. As twilight settled upon the land, the air grew heavy with dread. The cacophony of nature itself seemed to shriek in terror as if sensing the impending doom. It was on this fateful eve that my humble dwelling, nestled in the heart of our community, became a battlefield.

A bloodcurdling roar pierced the gloom, heralding the arrival of a vile Beastman warband. As I huddled within the confines of my home, I could hear the savage pounding of hooves upon the cobblestones and...

Shorthand: Vesk soldiers ambush during drift approach to a derelict Eoxian vessel. Stamina restored at rest. succeeded at great cost.

Narrative: Personal Log Stardate 73582.6

The past few days have been fraught with danger and close calls. Our approach to the derelict Eoxian vessel was marred by an unforeseen Vesk ambush in the drifting currents of the Drift. Their starship, the Veskan Scourge, loomed menacingly on our flank as they opened fire with their weapon batteries. My heart raced as I ducked for cover behind the helm station console.

Our quick response saved us from being crippled or worse. The engineering team managed to divert power from non-essential systems to the defenses. With a resolve point investment, I activated our...

Shorthand: Vesk soldiers ambush during drift approach to Drift space anomaly. Resolve Point spent. emerged victorious.

Narrative: Personal Log Entry #1678 - The Anomalous Encounter

Stardate: 3235.05.16

As we approached the uncharted drifting anomaly, our starship, the SS Vesper's hull was suddenly battered by energy discharges from an unknown source. I braced myself in the bridge, my heart pounding as blue alerts flashed around me. Our navigator, Tarkas, expertly maneuvered the ship through the incoming salvos, while our helmsman, Lyra, maintained our course with deft precision. Suddenly, a trio of Vesk soldiers dropped from the anomaly into our cargo bay, weapons at the ready.

I quickly drew my blaster and engaged th...

SCIFI / cyberpunk_red / combat

Shorthand: firefight with Militech squad in Arasaka tower. street cred raised to 6. failed and regrouped.

Narrative: Shit, I thought we had this one in the bag. The Militech goons were heavy, but our intel was solid - they weren't expecting us. But then something went sideways. Maybe it was the rogue ADAM drone, maybe it was just bad luck. Either way, we took casualties and had to bug out. My Street Cred took a nice bump from that job, up to a six now. But I can't help thinking about the corpse of my teammate, Razor, lying there in the Tower's cold, metal halls. We'll regroup, lick our wounds, and hit them back harder next time. But for now, I need a drink. And maybe a good, long conversation with the Shadow...

Shorthand: Maelstrom gang ambush in Night City. failed and regrouped. one casualty.

Narrative: Damn it all. We were so close to scoring big with that Maelstrom deal. The meet was set, the plan was solid, but as we approached the extraction point, something went sideways. Sirens blared through the neon-lit streets of the Westside as Red Eye network triangles lit up like Christmas trees. I scanned for nearby threats and relayed the info to the team, but before we could react, the Maelstrom goons sprang their trap.

We took them down quick enough, but not before they tagged our man, Voodoo, with a brain scrambler. By the time we reached him, his optic nerves had been fried and he wasn't g...

Narrative: I've been sitting here in the safehouse, my mind still racing from the adrenaline-fuelled mess that was the extraction site at the Barrens. The Johnsons had tasked us with extracting a precious piece of data, rumored to be worth a pretty penny in the black market. We arrived on the scene, me and my team - Ice, a decker; Edge, a shooter; and Neo, a mage - prepared for anything. Or so we thought.

As we approached the area, we scanned the surroundings with our drones, spotting several Aztechnology security personnel patrolling the perimeter. We moved in stealthily, taking out the guards one by o...

Narrative: Damn it. Another close call with the boys in blue. The Renraku Arcology, a hulking monolith of corporate might and technological wizardry, loomed over Neo-Tokyo like a steel-clad colossus. Its sprawling subterranean levels housed countless data banks filled with precious corporate intel, making it a prime target for shadowrunners looking to make their mark. And there I was, stuck in the middle of an unplanned firefight with a Lone Star patrol in the dark, damp recesses of this subterranean labyrinth.

As we approached the access point to level twelve, my team - Frostbite, a mage; Nimble Finger...

With my heart pounding in my chest, I took aim, preparing myself for the inevitable confrontation. My firearm trembled in my hands as I squeezed the trigger, the muzzle flashing briefly in the dimly lit water. A shadowy figure emerged from the gloom, its elongated limbs writhing sinuously as it approached me. Shorthand: confronted hunter cell at the Elysium salon. Humanity check: passed. barely survived.

Narrative: The cloying scent of saccharine perfume and stale champagne filled my nostrils as I crept through the shadows of the Elysium Salon, heart pounding in my chest like an infernal drum. My senses were on high alert, every nerve tingling with the knowledge that danger lurked within these hallowed grounds. As a Lorekeeper, I knew all too well the risks involved in traversing such territory, but sometimes the thirst for knowledge proved to be stronger than the fear of discovery.

Narrative: The fetid stench of decay clung to me as I descended into the depths of the subterranean labyrinth that lay beneath our fair city. The damp chill of the air seemed to seep into my very bones, leaving me feeling hollow and depleted. It was here, in these desolate corners far removed from the prying eyes of mortal society, that I had arranged to meet with the emissary of a rival Kindred faction - a Second Inquisition agent by the name of Marcellus.

The shadows danced around us as we stood face to face, the flickering glow of torches casting an eerie dance upon the ancient stone walls. His eyes...

Shorthand: discovered Farum Azula via a sending gate. Somber Smithing Stone (8) at the end.

Narrative: The air grew heavy with the scent of decay as we approached the hallowed grounds of Farum Azula. The once resplendent gardens, now overgrown with gnarled vines and lifeless trees, bore testament to the relentless march of time. The very earth beneath our feet seemed to groan with the weight of unspoken sorrows. It was a place that held the echoes of a past triumph tainted by tragedy, a reminder of the fleeting nature of victory.

As we delved deeper into the forsaken land, the cacophony of distant screams grew louder, and the ground began to tremble beneath our feet. The demigod Maliketh, the...

Narrative: The Nokron Eternal City, as they call it, is a place steeped in ancient sorrow and eternal decay. A city suspended in time, where the echoes of a long-lost civilization still reverberate through its crumbling walls. I, Lorekeeper, had come upon this place after hours of treacherous exploration through the depths of the underground caverns beneath the Lands Between. The city, once a beacon of enlightenment and knowledge, now lies forgotten and forsaken, a testament to the transience of power and the cruelty of fate.

As I delved deeper into the ruins of this once-great metropolis, my eyes were...

Narrative: After yet another late night, we finally did it. Mythic+ 16 in Siege of Boralus. The race for world first was intense and our team fought through countless setbacks to secure our spot among the top 200 guilds worldwide. I couldn't help but feel an indescribable mix of relief and elation when we finally crossed that threshold.

Our team pulled all the stops for this one. Each member brought their A-game, and boy, did we need it. We wiped more times than I care to remember. It felt like every mechanic was out to get us, every boss phase a cruel joke. Yet, we persevered. We analyzed our mistakes...

We had failed to spot the ambush party lurking in the shadows, and now they were upon us.

As the first arrow whizzed past my ear, I reached for the familiar comfort of my quarterstaff. I gritted my teeth and called out to my companions, "Take cover!" I knew that we were in trouble. I had failed my Insight check earlier, not sensing t...
